If You Believe in Me (Entangled Flirts) By Natalie J. Damschroder

He made a promise he intends to keep...

Three years ago, Amber Benedict fell in love with Kale Riker and pledged to wait for him to return from the military. Even though she rarely hears from him, she's steadfast in her belief: he's coming home to her, and soon. Then the government tells Kale's family that he's missing in action, and they have given him up for dead.

Kale Riker has been away from civilization and Amber for three long years. He's been promised he can retire his commission when he completes his current mission, but now he's seriously wounded and facing a long recovery. Worse still, security risks force a communications blackout, leaving him no way to let Amber know he's alive.

Can Amber hold out against an entire town pushing her to give up on love while Kale fights to get back home to her before Christmas?

Previously released on Entangled's Flirt imprint - December 2012.

Editorial Review

About the Author

Natalie J. Damschroder is a multi-published author of contemporary and paranormal romance, with an emphasis on romantic adventure. Her 11 novels, 7 novellas, and 15 short stories have been published by Avid Press, Echelon Press, and Amber Quill Press. She grew up in Massachusetts and loves the New England Patriots more than anything. (Except her family. And writing and reading. And popcorn.)

When she's not writing romantic adventure for Carina Press and paranormal romance for Entangled Publishing, she does freelance editing and works part time as a chiropractic assistant. She and her husband have two daughters they've dubbed "the anti-teenagers," one of whom is also a novelist. (The other one prefers math. Smart kid. Practical.) You can learn more about her and her books at nataliedamschroder.com, where you'll also find links to her blogs and social media.
