Constitutional Journal: A Correspondent's Report from the Convention of 1787 By Jeffrey St. John

Constitutional Journal is an account of the founding of the United States that students of the Constitution will enjoy reading for years to come. Veteran print and broadcast journalist St. John "reports" each day's proceedings, flavoring his dispatches with quotes from private correspondence and notes of the delegates. "The research is thorough and diligent and the writing is crisp and lucid." (Dr. James Hutson, Library of Congress)

Jeff Riggenschach's mission is to narrate a "you-are-there" type of book. Author St. John assumes the role of a newspaper reporter writing articles about the Constitutional Convention during the summer of 1787. He fills in his stories with quotes from the framers' diaries and gives life to what, in reality, were secret proceedings. Riggenschach's voice is the perfect accompaniment to this book. He has a good sense of how to make history interesting, and his voice is easy to understand. His no-frills voice, steady, firm and unemotional, suits the text well. Riggenschach gives the delegates a forum to air their views, but his voice never intrudes on the weight of their words.
