Paul Rand: Conversations with Students By Michael Kroeger

As one of the most influential and inspirational graphic designers of the twentieth century, Paul Rand defined modern American graphic design. His iconic logo designs for IBM, UPS, and the ABC television network distilled the essences of modernity for his corporate patrons. His body of work includes advertising, poster, magazine, and book designs characterized by simplicity and a wit uniquely his own. His ability to discuss design with insight and humor made him one of the most revered design educators of our time. This latest volume of the popular Conversations with Students series presents Rand's last interview, recorded at Arizona State University one year before his death in 1996. Beginners and seasoned design professionals alike will be informed by Rand's words and thoughts on varied topics ranging from design philosophy to design education.

Leon Bailey:

As a university student exactly feel bored to help reading. If their teacher expected them to go to the library in order to make summary for some guide, they are complained. Just small students that has reading's heart and soul or real their pastime. They just do what the trainer want, like asked to the library. They go to right now there but nothing reading very seriously. Any students feel that looking at is not important, boring and can't see colorful pictures on there. Yeah, it is to get complicated. Book is very important for yourself. As we know that on this era, many ways to get whatever we wish. Likewise word says, ways to reach Chinese's country. So , this Paul Rand: Conversations with Students can make you really feel more interested to read.
